Botner has both appointments one from Gov. of Virginia and one from Kentucky. Judge Ferguson was a noble, fearless man and now Botner is seeking a commission from God to house not made with hands eternal in the Heavens. Love to all. He has the two commissions now. O. D. Botner.

Richmond, Ky., October 5, 1907, will long be remembered by many of the students of the Eastern Kentucky State Normal School. Learning that a monument to the memory of Daniel Boone and his faithful comrades was to be unveiled on the site of Fort Boonsboro we procured wagonettes and proceeded thither. Each wagonette would hold just thirteen people and the drive. So thirteen boys and girls climbed in and after a jolly drive of thirteen miles through a fine section of Blue Grass country, often contending with some other carriage for the front place in the procession, we arrived at the historic spot.

Naturally the first thing we did was to proceed at once to the site of the old fort. There on the banks of Kentucky River, and in a bottom such as we see on Big Sandy, surrounded by a chain of hills not so high as those along the Big Sandy, those brave pioneers more than a century ago had selected the spot that was the scene of such a fitting celebration.

One cannot but admire the wisdom of Daniel Boone in selecting such an ideal spot, one that has gone down in history as the place where the first marriage ceremony west of the Alleghenies was performed and the first white child born. It was there that Samuel Henderson led the brave Betsey Calloway to the altar. Every school boy and girl is familiar with the capture of the Misses Callaway and Boone by the Indians and their rescue. We then went to the banks of the river near where this capture was made, and from there to the spring from which those brave girls carried water. Near this spring and in a grove of tall sycamores from which many later settlers cut bullets to put on their fishing lines, was erected a platform. From this platform the great deeds of those early pioneers who blazed the way for western settlement and civilization were told in a most interesting and instructive way by Senator James B. McCreary, Judge Kinkaid and others.

After the speaking, with a fitting and interesting ceremony, the monument was unveiled and honor paid to those long neglected heroes. All during the day the air was making such a heroic fight for the preservation and marking of those old historic spots.

It was now far past noon and every one was craving a little grub, so we got some water from that old historic spring, selected a suitable spot and partook of the rice lunch prepared by Mrs. A. T. Million, matron of Memorial Hall. After dinner we lingered for sometime around that sacred spot until the sun was sinking low in the sky. We then climbed into our carriages and drove back to Richmond each one declaring he had spent one of the most eventful days of his life.

Respectfully,
Willie Daniel.

SATURDAY EVENING REVERIES.

The sacrifice that so many of our young men are making to secure a position in a store, is really amusing. In almost all part of the country let any store-keeper proclaim that he has, or is likely to have, a vacancy, and he is forthwith over run with applications. We know of young men working for from two hundred to three hundred dollars per annum, and boarding themselves, who can command, as mechanics, three times the sum. Why is it that good mechanics of almost every kind are so scarce, and are commanding their own price, while so many young men are turning their backs upon their father's calling, and lying in wait for opportunities to measure calves between dingy walls, fourteen hours a day, for a mere pittance?

Do not flatter yourself, young man that your fortune is made, that you are a gentleman, when once you have secured a position behind Messrs. Yardsticks & Co's counter. You have an exceedingly hard road to travel to achieve anything like success. You may as well understand it first as last. Unless you have a large amount of energy, and are willing to work hard and long, and wait patiently, and have some natural adaptation to the business, the chances are that you will fail. Don't take on any airs the first year. The most detestable sight imaginable is a youth with half an intellect, half developed, puffed up with an exalted idea of his own importance because of his good clothes and six month's experience in a second rate retail shop.

Only one in a great many of our merchants succeed in making a fortune. Very many of them fail; and most of these who do not fail, only succeed by a lifetime of weary labor. No business is more confining. We know whereof we speak and we know right well the value of a little respite and a little snuff of pure air, and the pleasure of an occasional touch of bright, warm sunshine on the pallid cheek. But boys, if you think there is no other road to happiness, wealth and renown but to sell dry goods, try it. Let us assure you, however, that so long as there are so few learning to make boots and shoes and harness and hoes and pitchforks and brick walls, and people continue to need them so much, the chances in that direction are better for building a fortune, and establishing yourself as useful, honored, and influential members of society. If you are established in any business, we counsel you not to leave it. It is a question which requires consideration, and may, or may not be advisable. But if you are about to enter some field of labor, be not influenced by any false considerations of ease or respectability. You will succeed in nothing without continued effort; and you have ability and are willing to work to that end, you will be successful, and success will command respect.

OLD FOLKS.

A homestead without a pair of old folks—Times a doting chronicles—seated contentedly in the chimney corner, would hardly be a homestead at all. If they are in the picture, it is complete. There you may find them, day in and day out, in all sorts of weather, steadfast to their places and to one another. When the eaves drip in the middle of the winter forenoon, the old man with head of silver abandons his post and newspaper to make the accustomed tour of the kitchen offices, the shed, or the barn, lingering by the way to throw down a handful of grain for the plucked poultry. With what minuteness he is cautioned by grandmother not to go out insufficiently clad, and with what a single-hearted ogle she welcomes him when he comes back to her again. He would hardly get a warmer reception if he was just returning from a genuine polar expedition with Walter Wellman. As soon as he has nestled down snugly in his cushioned chair once more, he will launch out into such valuable details of the keen air outdoors, suggestive of Arctic reminiscences which no listener could very well call in question—as will find the white-haired old couple topic of earnest talk till dinner is brought on the table. Fortunate is the home where grandfather and grandmother still occupy their old arm chairs.

CHOOSE WELL.

The line of conduct chosen by a young man during the five years from fifteen to twenty, will in almost every instance, determine his character for life. As he is then careless, prudent or imprudent; industrious or indolent, truthful or dissimulating, intelligent or ignorant, temperate or dissolute, so will he be in after years, and it needs no prophet to cast his horoscope, or calculate his chances in life.

STARTING IN LIFE.

No young man who desires to succeed in business has any time to lose in shuffling about in experimental clerkship; and after finishing his school education the sooner he makes choice of his business for life, and sets himself to work to learn and become successfully established, the better. No young man can afford to make a mistake in his choice of occupation; the first choice should be the true one. For this reason we would say to a young man in regard to routine clerkship, by no means accept a place of that kind, not even if the salary is large; it may seem large at first, but there can be no compensation to a young man for the loss of time. Indeed, we are of the opinion that a young man, at the start, had better work for nothing, or even pay for the privilege of going into an establishment where he can learn a good business, than to take an ordinary clerkship at any price.

ONE SWALLOW.

One swallow doesn't make a summer, but some of our young men should remember that too many swallows are certain to make a fall.

A WORD TO BOYS.

Show us a boy who obeys his parents, who has a respect for age, who always has a friendly disposition, and who applies himself diligently to get wisdom and to do good toward others, and if he is not respected and beloved then there is no such thing as truth in world. Remember this, boys, and you will be respected by others, and grow up and become useful men.

HIS DEAR OLD MOTHER.

"My dear old mother, who is now eighty three years old, thrives on Electric Bitters," writes W. B. Brunson, of Dublin, Ga. "She has taken them for about two years and enjoys an excellent appetite, feels strong and sleeps well." That's the way Electric Bitters affect the aged, and the same happy results follow in all cases of female weakness and general debility. Weak, puny, children too, are greatly strengthened by them. Guaranteed also for stomach, liver and kidney troubles, by A. M. Hughes, Drugist, 65c.
